WASHINGTON CITY:

HONDAY June 12, 1971.

The Star by Mail. Persons leaving the city for the summer or any portion of it may have THE STAR sent to their address for such time as they desire, at the rate of fifty cents per month. Orders, accompanied by the money, should be sent to the business office of the paper.

Free-love as Defined by the Freelovers.

The quarrel between the Boston wing and the Woodhull & Claffin-wing of the woman suffragists upon the "Free-love" question increases blitterness as it goes on. Mrs. Woodhull threatened lately in her paper to expose the demestic rettenness of some of her assailants, and hinted pretty plainly that there was an ugly skeleton of this sort about the premises of Mr. Bowen of the Independent, who has made himself rather officious in dealing with her family affairs and indulged in some moralizing in the same connection on her free-love doctrines. This week she takes Mrs. Livermore, of the Boston party, in hand for slurring insinuations to the effect that she (Woodhull) is a bad woman "after the vulgar acceptance of the term free-love." Mrs. Woodhull then rises to explain that her theory of free-love is not that which should be denominated free-lust. The Mrs. Livermorekind-of-people, she says, have not souls and minds sufficiently broad to take in the full meaning of the word freedom. "There is," says Mrs Woodhull, "but one freedom in the whole world-All distinctive freedom is but limited bondage To be free in part is to be in part a slave. Mrs' Woodhull claims to be wholly free-to be an ini ridual sovereign in every way which pertains to adividual freedom." This is the way Mrs. Noodhull defines her views upon free-love. It sounds very fine, but leaves us in the fog. Like the Mrs. Livermore-kind-of-people, our minds are not broad enough to make the distinction, and say where free-love of this sort ends, and free

But the dashing sister, Tennie C. Claffin, in another column of their paper, gives, over her own signature, her views upon the marriage question. " Nature," she says, "proclaims in broadest terms, and all her subjects re-echo the same grand truth, that sexual unions, the result of which may be reproduction, are marriage. By analogy the same law ascends into the sphere of and applies among men and women; for are not they a part and parcel of nature in which this law exists as a principle? This law of nature God's marriage law, the enactment of men to the contrary notwithstanding. And the precise character of this marriage must be determined by the character of those united." And again the says :- " Now, suppose after this marriage to comprehend it. If this kind of marrying and unmarrying, after the fashion of the beasts of the field, is not free-lust, it is difficult to say what kind of "freedom" would come under Manifestly it was quite time for the portion of the woman suffragists who do not wish to be identified with these advanced views upon "individual freedom," to take a New Departure.

As was to have been expected, the proposition to run a steam railway track through S street is provoking sharp opposition on the part of those residing or owning property thereon, and a public meeting has been called to take measures to prevent its consummation. Not only this, but the project is likely to prove equally unpopular their only outlet to the country thus barricaded by screaming locomotives and rattling trains. When it is remembered that a large proportion of our market supplies comes in from the north, and that the only access to the fresh air of the country for three-fourths of our citizens is in that direction, the prospect may well excite approhension. There is indeed reason to fear that there would be runaways and accidents enough to satisfy the most rapacious item-gatherer if the

And there seems to be no real need, so far as the accommodation of the public is concerned. for so putting life and property in peril. In fact, the reverse is the case. The natural and proper route by which railways should reach and pass through a city situated like ours is by or in the Agency at vicinity of the several water courses. By this means all the various lines could, without damage to streets required for other uses, converge at a common center on or near the water front, where transfers of passengers and freight could cars to vessels and vice versa, without cost of cartage or handling, and without loss of time.

This, in a general way, is the true solution of a very serious question, which must be squarely met and finally disposed of at no distant day, and which becomes more formidable the longer its determination is postponed.

Although the vote of the French assembly which abrogates the proscription against the Orleans princes was more than four to one in their favor, yet it will not do to assume hastily that the French have therefore a preference for a monarchy, or that the four hundred and eightyan anti-republican feeling. Thiers himself. while arguing in favor of removing their disabilifor a republic, and this was no doubt the case with many who voted with the majority. The cable news is so meager, however, that it is not safe to attempt to estimate the full significance of the recent action of the assembly until further particulars are received by mail. Hven if France is really "sliding down an incline into a monarchy" as one of the Paris papers puts it, neither the Duke de Aumale nor the Prince de Joinville can expect to reach the throne. If hereditary claims are to be asserted the title will be in the Count de Paris, in whose favor Louis Phillipe wished to abdicate in 1848. Some of the Paris papers seem to anticipate a strong effort by the Bonapartists to cleet delegates in the supplement tary sections for the assembly. From present appearances, however, the Boneparte party has lost prestige and strength.

Henry S. Poote bout in a letter against his old adversory, Jeff. Davis, charging that noted insurance agent with trying to get up a new rebellion. Foots is pretty sound on the Davis question, but his sentences are so fearfully long that most newspaper readers will decline to folthe next eighty-nine, the next one hundred and twenty-four, the next thirty-nine, and the next two hundred and eighty-coven!
